Dawn of the Cattle Drive

Tour 1

4 nights/5 Days

Friday 30 July – Tuesday 3 August 2010

Price Per Person 1800,-- €

HIGHLIGHTS

The beginning of an historic journey, a unique journey - your journey. Get ready to sit back and be apart of an historical re-enactment, moving a real herd through real outback wilderness.

Located on Anna Creek Station, you have the rare opportunity to enter the world's largest cattle station, measuring some 23,000 square kilometres (5.5million acres), which is roughly the size of Belgium. The station has been continuously occupied since it was located in 1872, resisting the effects of drought, flood and adverse economic conditions - the only property in the region to have done so.

On your first afternoon, you'll be a part of the 'handover and counting of cattle', the official start of the Drive. Next morning it's down to business. The scenery is spectacular with sandy dunes & wide flat corridors covered with native plants such as hopbush and horse mulga. You will follow the remains of the original Ghan railway track as well as what's left of the Overland Telegraph line - critical in the settling of Australia's interior. Hear stories of the settlers, their successes and failures along with historical accounts by descendants from original inhabitants, the indigenous people.

You'll do as much or as little of this cattle drive as you wish; optional coach tours on Days 3 and 4 are available to show you further regional highlights and histories. Experience the Outback from a unique vantage point and join a scenic flight at an additional cost.

Your village of superior tented accommodation is Anna Creek Campsite, located 26km from William Creek.

HIGHLIGHTS

Located on Anna Creek Station, you have the rare opportunity to enter the world's largest cattle station, measuring some 23,000 square kilometres (5.5million acres), which is roughly the size of Belgium. The station has been continuously occupied since it was located in 1872, resisting the effects of drought, flood and adverse economic conditions - the only property in the region to have done so.

Cattle droving is thirsty business. So the outpost of William Creek - complete with roadhouse, campsite, racetrack, airport and 'rocket park' will make for a very special stop. With a population of less than 10, it's often claimed to be Australia's smallest town. What's beyond dispute is the fact it's home to one of Australia's most isolated pubs. What can we say about the William Creek Hotel? It's probably best left as a surprise - but suffice to say, it's like no other!

Over your 50-odd-kilometre journey you will experience diverse landscapes. Watch as the scenery changes from gravelly clays with scattered river red gum and coolibah above lemon scented grass to undulating stony tableland and then into deep red to yellow sand dunes with sandy clay swales.

You can do as much or as little of this cattle drive as you wish; optional coach tours on Days 3 and 4 are available to show you further regional highlights and histories. Experience the Outback from a unique vantage point and join a scenic flight at an additional cost.

HIGHLIGHTS

Located on Anna Creek Station, you have the rare opportunity to enter the world's largest cattle station, measuring some 23,000 square kilometres (5.5million acres), which is roughly the size of Belgium. The station has been continuously occupied since it was located in 1872, resisting the effects of drought, flood and adverse economic conditions - the only property in the region to have done so.

As you travel across deep red sandy dunes keep your eyes out for historic farm relics left by the drovers of the past. Although the creeks are dry, seasonal rains often leave the desert vibrant with plants and animals.
